The Cotton Markets.

NEW YORK COTTON MARKET. NEW YORK COTTON MARKET.
New York, Dec. 11.—From a speculative view point to-day's cotton market was not a success. At no time was the trading active, while most of the session the pit was nearly deserted. Afteropening easy at a decline of 5@7 points—this in response to an unfavorable turn of affairs in Liverpool, attributed to the British reverses in South Africa—the market followed a most uneventful course. The forencon apathy was accounted for in that alconfusion of ideas existed concerning the probable showing of the December Government report, but even after that a long-looked for statement had come to hand there was little or no stimulation to ment report, but even after that a longlooked for statement had come to hand there was little or no stimulation to trading. The crowd in the pit appeared
